

Sanctuary Judge Sets Convicted Felon Free. He Immediately Attacks Grandmother at Gas Station.

By Cole Harrison

Let me tell you what's really happening in our courts. Federal judges are putting their politics above your family's safety. These activist judges – wearing their black robes like superhero capes – think they know better than the rest of us. Ever wonder why crime keeps getting worse? Look no further than these judges playing politics with people's lives.

The damage isn't some abstract legal theory. It's real. It's measured in attempted carjackings. In terrorized families. In elderly women fighting for their lives at gas stations. When judges choose to protect violent criminals instead of law-abiding Americans, they're basically handing out free passes for chaos.

Earlier this month, U.S. District Judge Rita Lin – another Biden appointee – did something unbelievable. She blocked Immigration and Customs Enforcement from deporting Guillermo Medina Reyes. Who's Reyes? Just an illegal immigrant convicted of attempted murder when he was 16. But Judge Lin decided this dangerous criminal deserved protection. Liberal activists cheered outside the courthouse. Meanwhile, Reyes walked free.

Crime Spree Unfolds

Here's where it gets terrifying. Just weeks after getting his get-out-of-jail-free card, Reyes went on a rampage. Picture this – you're driving with your 3-year-old in the backseat. Suddenly, a violent criminal tries to steal your car. With your baby inside! That's exactly what Reyes did to one father.

But wait, it gets worse. When that carjacking failed, Reyes tried hijacking a big rig truck. He stole the driver's phone first. Then he attacked a woman in her 60s at a gas station. She was just trying to pump gas! The brave grandmother fought back by dousing him with gasoline.

From 'The Post Millennial':

Police say it began when Reyes called 911 to report a woman screaming in a vacant house next to where he had been staying. Officers responded and noted a broken window and cuts on Reyes' hands. After the police left, a shirtless man, later identified as Reyes, allegedly approached a big-rig driver, stole his cell phone, and attempted to hijack the truck.

Can you imagine? A three-year-old child nearly became a carjacking victim because a judge thought protecting a criminal was more important than protecting innocent kids. As a parent, this makes my blood boil. These aren't just statistics. They're our neighbors. Our families. Real Americans betrayed by judges who care more about criminals than citizens.

Pattern of Judicial Activism

Judge Lin isn't the only one playing this dangerous game. The Department of Justice just filed a complaint against Judge James Boasberg. He's been blocking deportations too. Notice a pattern? These are all Democrat appointees turning courtrooms into criminal protection schemes.

Here's what gets me – the media called Reyes a “beloved Bay Area tattoo artist.” (Yeah, beloved by who exactly?) They called him an “immigrant rights advocate.” They buried the part about attempted murder. And that year-and-a-half he spent in ICE detention. This whitewashing of violent criminals is standard practice for the left. They see every deportation as some tragedy. What about the tragedy of American families living in fear?

I’ll tell you what this is – it’s insanity. When firefighters had to give Reyes Narcan and cops described him as “combative and altered,” guess who paid? You did. Your tax dollars covered his medical care. His arrest. His mental health evaluation. Every penny spent on this criminal is money stolen from your kids’ schools. From fixing your roads. From helping actual Americans in need.

What planet are these judges living on? Judge Lin’s message is crystal clear: violent criminal immigrants matter more than American children. This twisted joke of justice cannot stand. How many more toddlers need to face carjackers? How many grandmothers have to fight off attackers at gas stations? Every victim of these protected criminals – their suffering is on these activist judges.

Americans must demand judges who follow the law. Not rewrite it. Our children’s lives depend on it.
